

DETECTIVE CHIEF HAD CLOSE CALL

Attacked in Office by Desperate Suspect.

HELP CAME IN TIME

Victim of Assault Was Famous Head of Pittsburgh's Plain Clothes Division.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 2.—A desperate attempt on the life of Superintendent of Detectives Thomas A. McQuade was made by Edward Johnson, a giant colored man from Chicago, while the detective superintendent was questioning the man alone in his office in the Public Safety building.

It was only after a desperate battle in which the superintendent was finally assisted by four of his men and a clerk that the obstreperous visitor was subdued. McQuade and the other detectives were slashed with a paper-knife that Johnson grasped from McQuade's desk.

Caught in Pawnshop.
Johnson was arrested in a pawnshop on complaint of the proprietor of the place because he was making an effort to sell a quantity of jewelry valued at nearly $1,000.

The man was taken into the office of Superintendent McQuade. All of his pockets had been searched, but the superintendent was not satisfied. He ordered the man to take off his shoes, and as he refused, McQuade was making preparations to take them off for him. It was while the superintendent was in a stooping position that the attack was made. Johnson threw his arms around the neck of the superintendent, at the same time reaching for a large paper knife which was on the desk.

Once in possession of the knife Johnson made desperate efforts to stab McQuade, while the latter tried to get his finger on the push button under his desk to summon help.

The colored giant was fast getting the better of the superintendent when the latter succeeded in reaching the call button. When Detective McDougall opened the door the man had McQuade clutched tightly by the throat with one hand while with the other he was making wild efforts to stab him.

McDougall immediately went to the assistance of his chief, calling others. The giant fought like a wild man for freedom. Finally, however, he was knocked partially insensible by a blow from a slingshot, after which he was quickly bound and taken to a cell.
